THE PEACE PROCLAMATION.

BY SARAH J. C. WHITTLESEY.

Thank God for the sunshine of gladness again,
That golden's our Southern's b'le morning!
Th' Lord for the surecuse of sorrow and pain
That comes with the dawn of the morning.
All hail to the Bethel-men star that burns o'er
The bote of sweet PEACE ne'er given
Good Shepherd and wise men rejoice as of yore
And worship the young child from heaven!
God bless the grand Hero who stands between!

And him to this new born to earth!—
Who holds in obeyance the Heros of State;
Thank God that the South gave him birth!
It was not enough that my own sunny land
Was tilled or weath'd or bloom'd,
But tyrants w'd hold her with pitiless hand
Cruel, helpless and he pites, long o'er.
It was not enough that the prod gal son
Should say to his mother, forgive,
But the brother must whimper and whine for the one.

Envied gift of the father—to live.

Thank G'd for the hand that hath broken the chains.

That teared the suff ring South—
That showered the due o'er her desolate plains.

And end'd the w'r's long drought!

All hail to the day-tar that gl dens the earth,

With golden rays gilding them-raw!

Thank G'd that the sw'v sunn'z out gave him birth.

Who giveth her succor from sorrow!
